Dear Parent:

The Education Consolidation and Improvement Act of 1981 requires that each year the nation's school-age children be permitted to determine the number of low-income students for the purpose of Title I of that act which provides federal monies for students who are educationally and economically disadvantaged. This money is used to develop educational programs to assist the qualified students to improve their basic educational needs.

This information is extremely important to determine the level of participation of nonpublic school students in other government-sponsored programs.

The following United States Department of Agriculture family-size income criteria may be used in determining eligibility.
